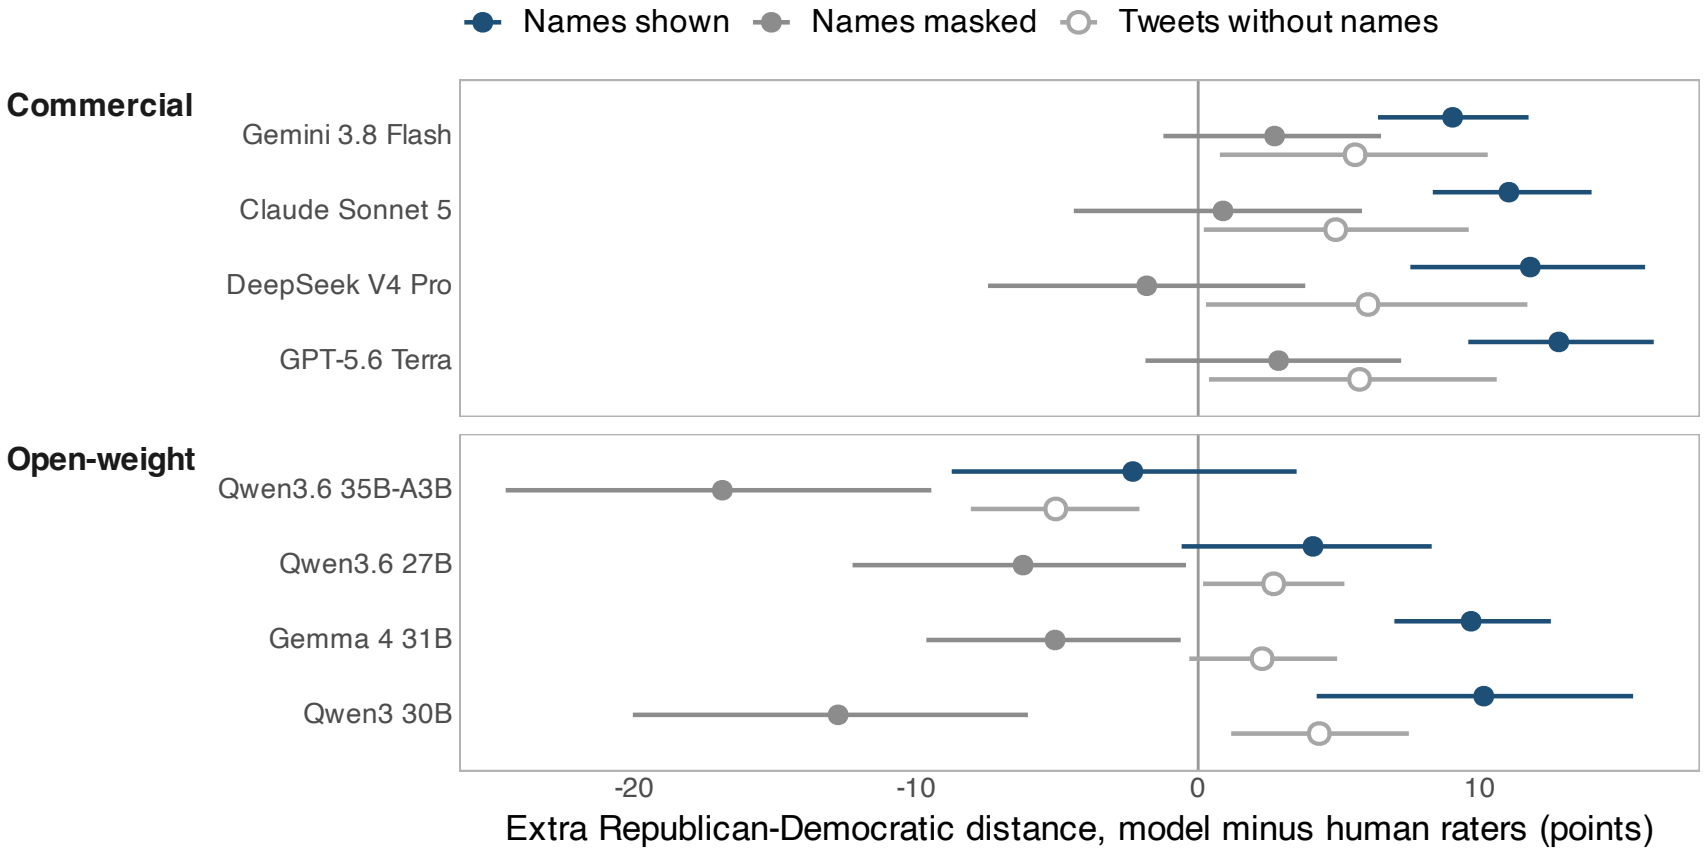
With names in the tweet, LLMs read more party into it

How much further apart the model places Republican and Democratic tweets than human raters did (points on a 0-100 left-right scale)



144 tweets by members of Congress that name a party or politician (Le Mens and Gallego). Human raters saw the tweets with the names. Masked: names replaced by [PARTY] or [POLITICIAN], everything else identical. Tweets without names: 89 (commercial) and 356 (open-weight) sampled tweets. Not-political answers scored as 50. 95% intervals, bootstrap over tweets.
